FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

- The Global Islamic Index continued to climb in February, powered by a broadly robust fourth-quarter reporting season, which saw Wall Street clock its longest winning streak in three decades. Despite the Federal Reserve's hawkish rhetoric on interest rates and a lack of clarity on US President Donald Trump's policies, Chinese and European markets fared well, bolstered by positive global data.
- In February, we added to Perrigo following our meetings with the new management team and chairperson, which gave us greater comfort with regard to the challenges the business facing. We believe the company has an attractively-valued franchise, with a solid pipeline of new product releases that will benefit from a structural shift towards over-the-counter drugs.
- Against this, we trimmed CVS Health given our concerns over increased competition and questions surrounding the position of pharmacy benefit management in the US health care sector.
