FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

Yields came down in the month of November, averaging at about 8bps lower, amid lingering concerns over the stalling of US and China sealing a trade deal. However, the market continues to be soft as we head towards year end and profit taking activities will continue until the rest of the year. As such we are temporarily shortening duration to around 5 – 5.5 years while holding slightly higher cash. However, we continue to expect interest rates to be lower with the possibility of more rate cuts in the US going into next year. We also see the possibility of BNM cutting the OPR by 25 bps in the next 6 months. The recent cut in SRR will see a large bulk of the resultant liquidity flowing into the bond market. As such, we continue to see support for the bond market.
