FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

The Fund gained 0.76% during the month of April 2016, underperforming the benchmark which gained 1.75%. Stock selection in the underlying United States (US) funds contributed positively while stock selection in the European and Japanese funds detracted Fund performance. YTD, the Fund fell 10.63% while the benchmark fell 7.74%.

Eurozone's Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) improved slightly to 51.7 in April from 51.5 in March. In the US, the PMI numbers has been trending down this year and fell to 50.8 in April, its lowest reading since Sept 2009. Japanese manufacturing activity has also been trending down and slipped deeper into contraction territory in April at 48.2.

Due to the improved PMI reading in the Eurozone, we increased exposure in Europe to overweight. Meanwhile, we reduced our position in Japan to underweight due to continued Yen strengthening. Given that Japan aims to achieve inflation rate of 2%, a rising Yen hurts Japanese exporters and puts downward pressure on import prices, thereby exacerbating the inflation downward. The Fund is neutral in the US market.
