FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

For the month of January 2017, the Fund gained 0.84% outperforming the benchmark by 0.09%.

The FTSE Bursa Malaysia Kuala Lumpur Composite Index (FBMKLCI) rebounded by 1.8% in January 2017 as local funds deployed their excess cash to reposition for the new year. Corporate news on GLC reforms particularly PNB related companies have increased optimism that the GLC restructuring is gathering momentum.

We maintained the view that the local market will remain choppy and will trade between 1,650 - 1,750 points with a slight upward bias. Potential positive catalysts are: 1) 4Q16 earnings season does not disappoint followed by earnings upgrades for 2017, 2) further evidence of corporate exercise on GLC restructuring to unlock values, 3) speculation of early elections. Foreign investors still have an underweight exposure in Malaysia and from a valuation and currency perspective, Malaysia remains fairly compelling. We have recently upgraded plantations to an overweight and continue to be constructive on companies that will benefit from GLC restructuring theme in sectors such as Telecommunications, Plantations and Services. We continue to seek growth ideas in the aviation and tourism related sectors.

For fixed income, The MGS yield curve normalized in January 2017 following an inverted yield curve in December 2016 as 30-year MGS was traded lower versus the 20-year MGS. Consequently, yield curve bull steepened as demand on the shorter end from 15-year below pushed the yields lower versus a month ago. Trading volume for corporate bonds was higher than previous month as market players start to rebuild portfolios for the new financial year. Focus remained in the AA and GG segment. During the month, credit spread widened for the 3 and 5 years with mixed action for the other tenures. We see continued risk and volatility to come from uncertainties with regards to the tightening by the US Fed, future US policies/rhetoric under Donald Trump and political developments in the Eurozone. Bank Negara Malaysia (BNM) kept the Overnight Policy Rate (OPR) unchanged at 3.00% as expected during its first meeting of the year in January. The tone of the Monetary Policy Committee's (MPC) statement was broadly neutral. Despite the recent rally in sovereign market in December 2016 and January 2017, the MGS and MGII valuations are still relatively attractive taking into consideration OPR is expected to stay unchanged for 2017. For corporate bonds, we expect corporate bonds spread to move wider with new issuances coming into the market.

We will be looking to put money to work in MGS and GII with preference on the short to medium tenors. We will be cautious as the large and more frequent 2017 MGS/MGII issuances could see longer dated yields remain elevated. We will participate in the MGS/MGII auctions for opportunistic trade based on attractive valuations. We also propose to switch into re-priced short to medium lower rated corporate bonds from the primary and secondary market for yield pickup. Source: CIMB-Principal Asset Management Bhd
